WHO'S WHO OF AMERICAN WOMEN: Marquis-Listed Biographees, Women's Section, National Biographee Reference File

All selected for listing in this edition of "Who's Who of American Women" since compilation began (except those listed on the preceding pages, who have, at the Editors' invitation, supplied entry-information to the Marquis National Biographee Reference File, follow. Publication of their individual entry data occurs subject, among other factors (including the availability of them in other Marquis biographical dictionaries), to (1) the specific limitations applying to each volume; to (2) the Editors' evaluations based on (a) the content balance they desire to approximate in a volume, and (b) their opinion of the probable scope of individual subjectivity to reference enquiry (national, inter-group and intra group); and (3) the Editor's arbitrary adjustments of the content of each volume to the comparative degree of representation they have found practicable of attainment at the three mentioned levels of subjectivity to reference interest—at the intra-group level because of the larger over-all numbers involved, a representation corresponding to that practicably possible at the national and inter-group levels is not feasible. Each Marquis biographee selected for, and supplying data for, listing in the Marquis National Biographee Reference File has been considered by the Editors to come under appropriate standards based on over sixty years of experience gauging subjectivity to reference interest resulting from meritorious factors. The compilers assemble from the File for publication from time to time in each Marquis biographical dictionary, the content they assume appropriate under the Editors' specifications under the conditions detailed above. It follows that selection under standards fixed for entry in the Biographical File, and supplying, following invitation to do so on notification of selection, information for the entry, establishes status as a Marquis-listed biographee, and not the variable incidence of publication of individual data.
